MANY GOOD BYES: THOUSANDS SAY FAREWELL TO MILLS AND GREENWOOD.

MORNING REVIEW

FRIDAY, MARCH 21, 1890.

The Last Services at the Opera House—Speeches and Handshakings—A Final Prayer Meeting—Escorted to the Depot. It looked as if the people were anxious not to let Mr. Mills and Mr. Greenwood go, for their sight a single one of the few remaining minutes they had in Decatur. At any rate they saw as much of them as they could at the opera house, and then 1,300 people went to the depot to see them off. Certain it is that there are few men in this world who could come here, and after a stay of less than three weeks, make as many sincere friends as have these two. AT THE OPERA HOUSE. An 9 o'clock people began to gather at the opera house, and at 10 minutes to 10 every seat on the floor and in the balcony was taken. By 10 the house was full. The service was begun by singing "Bring us the Shovel" with Mrs. G. Patterson at the organ. Prayer was offered by Mr. Greenwood. Mr. Mills then read a part of the 20th chapter of Acts, Paul's last words to the people at Ephesus. Mr. Greenwood sang a solo, the words of which P. P. Bliss was engaged in writing at the time of the terrible Ashabula disaster, "I Know Not What Awaits Me." The text was 11 Corinthians, xlii:11—"Finally, brethren, farewell. Be perfect, be of good comfort, be of one mind, live in peace; and the God of love and peace be with you." He said: "The difficulty this morning is not to find a sermon to preach, but to know how to say all that I want to say. There are so many thoughts that are pressing upon me at this time for utterance that it is hard to say anything." He said he should like to preach a sermon on each one of the different subjects, which he could only suggest. First on the power of the cause of Jesus Christ. There never was a time when the cause of Christ had as much power as to-day. Col. Ingersoll or any other man could not speak about any other man than Christ, in this city for three weeks, and have the audiences that gather to hear about Christ. There is no drawing power in this world that could entice the attention of people and hold the attention as the cause of Jesus Christ. People are gathering in ever increasing throngs, through wind and storm, with almost every sort of discomfort, not that they might hear any wonderful words delivered, but that they might listen to the simplest sort of language that speaks about God. Second, about the practical unity of the Christian church. Some people are very much afraid that the Church of God is not united. There is no real difference. All churches of Christ are practically one. The Christian people here hardly know one another apart. There has hardly been a ripple here to cause anyone to know to what church another belongs. There are some suggestions that might be made concerning certain responsibilities that God has laid upon the church as a whole, rather than upon certain individuals. No institution has a right to exist for moral purposes except as the agent of the churches, but every town like this ought to have some permanent organization by which the people could be gathered together in unity. The churches ought to support the Y. M. C. A., just as they do the churches. Let it be a general rallying ground, where the people of God might meet for aggressive work. You need a work done here especially for the young men that can be better done by your churches together than by your churches separately. There ought to be such a blessing of God and power of God upon that institution that there should never be a weak, hardly a day go by, without some of your young men giving themselves to Jesus Christ. The young men and boys are those of whom we make men, and as a representative of all these churches you ought to have a grand earnest, powerful and spiritual association here. Give your heartiest cooperation in this matter. Pay up the little debt that is upon this association and be the means of saving the young men who might otherwise be lost, and make the rooms finer than those of any club room in town. Another topic that the speaker took up was the saloon. He said that the church of God is responsible for the existence of the saloon in this city. A Christian man is morally responsible for the evils of the saloon. There is no question but that the church of God here can shut up every saloon and keep them closed. On the one hand it is a material influence that leads men to support this evil, and on the other hand, it is a moral influence that actuates men to have them closed. Speaking to those who were Christians before these meetings began, he said, you are responsible before God for these who have just commenced the Christian life. They are in a very practical sense, your children, and God will hold you responsible for them, and these children are going to act just about as you act. It leaves a tremendous responsibility upon you to be Godly people. The speaker then said he would like to preach five sermons to those just beginning the Christian life. You have chosen to serve the Lord and you will have to feed yourselves upon the Bible. You do not always find the gold on the surface, very rarely you do. Men have to dig in order to get it. You are going to have to learn how to pray. Speaking of what is sometimes called a doubtful question, there are very few doubtful questions. It is an indication that your spiritual character is very little developed if you want to know whether it is right to play cards and whether it is right to go to the theater or to dance, because you know if you are walking with God you will not have to confer with anyone else about it. If you have any question whether a thing is right or wrong, do not do it. It is better to leave undone a thing that is questionable than to do a thing that is wrong. Make your surrender to God before you try to decide these questions. Do not try to see what the latest thing is, but let your heart be a Christian you can be, but try to see how grand and great and strong you can be. You are going to join a church. Some people say they ought to get along outside as well as in the inside. If you can get along without it here, you can throughout eternity. So if you cannot live so as to make the world lonely when you are gone, let it be your ambition to live, not for yourself alone, but for this lost world. As the choir was singing, the ushers passed the cards for the last time, receiving about 40. Rev. T. W. Pinkerton then introduced W. R. Scruggs, who said: "Mr. Mills, as one of the business men of this city, I beg to express to you in their name, and in their behalf, their good wishes and hearty thanks for what you have done in Decatur. We think you are the manliest man we have ever seen. The influence you

Which Will Be Distributed Under the Direction of Secretary Clancy—This Will Make the Total Edition Twenty-Five Thousand Copies—A Committee Appointed to Supervise the Work. Within the past two weeks the canvass in behalf of the special illustrated Trade and Industrial Review of Decatur, in course of preparation by this paper, has been meeting with such remarkable success that it has been found necessary to enlarge the original plan, and it has now been decided to issue the edition in pamphlet form. The pages will be about 10x13 inches, and the book will contain about 50 or 60 pages. It will be substantially bound, and will be much more convenient for reference and for filing away than if the pages were larger. It will be printed in the best style on tinted book paper, and in spite of all these improvements the price will remain the same as heretofore announced, only 10 cents a copy. The board of trade, having shown their appreciation of the value to the city of the work, The Review has undertaken and have not only contracted for 5,000 copies of the edition to be distributed by the secretary, but will also appoint a committee to assist in the preparation of the same and to supervise the articles descriptive of Decatur's general trade and manufacturing advantages. This big order makes the edition of 35,000 an assured fact, and the end is not yet. Every day dozens of orders come from private citizens in Decatur and also from other towns in the county. These orders run from five to 50 copies each, and are very welcome because we want to be sure and print enough to supply the demand and those who send in their orders in advance will be sure of getting what they want. Every subscriber to THE REVIEW will receive a copy of this special edition free, with the compliments of the paper, but there is not a subscriber who cannot use to good advantage, half a dozen extra copies. We want an advance sale of at least 10,000 copies, in this way, and we want the orders all registered within the next 10 days, if possible. The illustrated feature of the work is progressing wonderfully. A list of some of the new views to be presented will be printed to-morrow. The canvass is now in active progress, and the more liberal the encouragement we receive, the more elaborate and complete will be the work, and the more extended will be its circulation. This is true generally of wheat sown broad-cast, while drilled wheat shows greater promise of weathering the season. The frosts of this month are what will decide the fate of the wheat, and the few recent cold spells have done much toward destroying the prospect.
